Foreword

The wide-spread response to the "Brunswick" Tokens article in the August, 1974, issue of the TAMS Journal suggested a need for a more extensive, and perhaps more definitive, treatment of the trade tokens carrying the advertising card of Brunswick & Company, the Brunswick-Balke Company, and the Brunswick-Balke-Collender Company — all of which we here call the "Brunswick" tokens for the sake of brevity.

Token buffs from throughout the country called, wrote, or came by to talk about the article, and especially as it related to tokens in their collections. Some told of types and varieties not shown in the original article, others added bits of historical information or sent in documents bringing new facts to light, while still others asked simply that their maverick "Brunswick" tokens to be attributed as to city and state of the issuing establishment. Unfortunately, we could supply this information only in rare instances.

Of the many collectors who evinced an interest in the "Brunswick" tokens, there emerged two who had especially significant contributions to make to the subject. One is Paul White, TAMS #2498, who has made a comprehensive and meticulously detailed study of the many types and varieties of these tokens. The other is Dick Magnuson, TAMS #1622. Dick has specialized in the collection and study of these tokens for years. The exhaustive listing of the tokens in Dick's collection, plus others of which he has knowledge, adds substance and meaning to this document.

Together, the three of us decided to pool our resources to compile here all of the information on the "Brunswick" tokens now known to us. Hopefully, the results will prove to be of interest to a goodly section of the TAMS membership, and we shall have the pleasure of having contributed in a small way to the literature of our hobby.

As is fairly common with studies of this kind, the deeper we have dug into our subject the more we have become aware of the meagerness of the information available to us and of how much there is yet to be discovered about the "Brunswick" tokens. Consequently, we plan to continue accumulating pertinent information with the expectation of supplementing this document from time to time as sufficient data comes to hand. To this end, we solicit the help of our readers. Rubbings and/or descriptions of unlisted tokens, as well as any other information relative to the Brunswick tokens, will be gratefully received and acknowledged by any one of the co-authors of this document.

Historical Backdrop

Brunswick has been the name of the game in billiards since 1845. That was the year that John M. Brunswick produced the first billiard table "made in the U.S.A." in his Cincinnati workshop. John had originally come from Basel, Switzerland, to Philadelphia, where he served as a carriage maker's apprentice before moving along to Cincinnati where he established his own wood-working and cabinet making business.

John's first customer liked his table, told his friends, and John soon found himself engaged in the full-time production of billiard tables and related equipment. John took his brothers into the business, then his son-in-law, Moses Bensinger, who later succeeded him as head of the company. Moses and his descendents have continued to give the business a family flavor from that time until the present day.

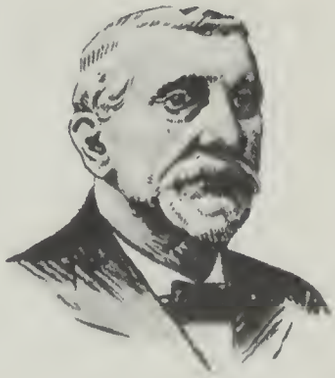
By 1858, the company — then operating as "J.M. Brunswick & Bro." (This brother is believed to have been Joseph) — was expanding beyond Cincinnati, and David and Emanuel established the Chicago branch office at 137 Randolph Street. By the time the Civil War broke out, there were also branches in St. Louis, New Orleans and other cities, and Brunswick billiard equipment had a wider marketable range than that of any other manufacturer in this country or abroad.

The "J.M. Brunswick & Bro." operating title was retained until 1872, although it was changed to "J.M. Brunswick & Bros." during the 1866-1870 period when Emanuel was listed as a principal along with John M. and Joseph. Emanuel seems to have been the restless member of the family. In 1863 or '64, he left the firm and became proprietor of the Chicago branch office of The Great Western Billiard Table Manufacturing Company. In all likelihood this was planned business strategy, for by 1866 Emanuel was back with the company as a principal, a budding competitor in the Chicago area had been eliminated, and Brunswick had acquired a Chicago manufacturing facility. This move also likely was the first step in the merger with Julius Balke, proprietor of The Great Western Billiard Table Manufactory in Cincinnati, and Brunswick's primary rival for the burgeoning western market.

By 1871, Emanuel had again left the firm and had set up in Chicago as an independent manufacturer of billiard tables under the title of E. Brunswick & Company. This firm became Brunswick Bros., Stephani & Hart (1875-77) and then Brunswick & Company (1877-1894). The principals of the Brunswick Bros., Stephani & Hart Company were Emanuel, Joseph, Hyman and Solomon Brunswick, Joseph Lindauer, George Stephani and Robert Hart. When the firm was reorganized as Brunswick & Company in 1877, Emanuel dropped out and was not again listed in the Chicago directories. He did, however, show up in San Francisco in 1880 as agent for Brunswick-Balke and later — in 1887 or 88 — established the E. Brunswick Billiard Table Company of San Francisco. This firm is listed in only the 1888 and '89 San Francisco directories.

Moses Bensinger began his career as a jeweler's apprentice. In 1869 he joined Brunswick as a salesman. Elected president 1890; served until his death in 1904.

On the other hand, J.M. Brunswick & Bro. was substantially reorganized in 1872 and became the J.M. Brunswick Billiard Manufacturing Company with John M. as president. Moses Bensinger (who had married John's daughter Eleanor) and two long time employees, A. F. Troescher and Leo Schmidt, were the other principal officers. In 1874 the J.M. Brunswick Billiard Manufacturing Company merged with the firm of its rival Cincinnati billiard table manufacturer, Julius Balke, who also had again moved into the Chicago market area. The new firm became the J.M. Brunswick & Balke Company, although the plural abbreviation "Cos." was often used on the trade tokens bearing the Company's advertising card.



In 1874, Julius Balke, rival Cincinnati billiard manufacturer, joined Brunswick. Firm name was changed to The J.M. Brunswick & Balke Company.

Ten years later the J.M. Brunswick & Balke Company united with the New York firm of H.W. Collender, and once again there was a name change — this time to the Brunswick-Balke-Collender Company. This time the title was to remain unaltered for three quarters of a century — until 1960 when the organization became simply the Brunswick Corporation.

Brunswick Diversifies

Soon after the move to Chicago, Brunswick began branching out into other areas.

Many billiard parlors were operated in conjunction with saloons or bars, and expansion into the production of saloon fixtures was an obvious step, as was the manufacture of bowling alleys, pins and balls. Metal tokens, or "checks" as the Brunswick people called them, were handled by the company as a convenience to its customers — either sold at a nominal price or else thrown in with the purchase of new equipment.

One thing led to another. Many other products followed, including bank and office fixtures, ice boxes made under the name of Wickes Refrigerators, and Brunswick automobile tires (subsequently sold to B.F. Goodrich), phonographs and phonograph records, radios and combinations. Today the Brunswick name is still a hallmark of quality as it has been for more than a century. The Brunswick Corporation is now a strong conglomerate, operating worldwide in the fields of health, recreation and technical products. And, although its products range from medical supplies to missile components, the Brunswick Corporation continues to honor its founder, John M. Brunswick, by maintaining a position of leadership in the manufacture of fine billiard tables and related equipment.

Other Billiard Supply Manufacturers in the Token Business

Brunswick was not the only billiard table manufacturer handling trade tokens for its customers, and likely was not the first. Certainly, H.W. Collender was supplying tokens some time before he joined Brunswick-Balke (Actually, he came with the Company in 1879, but the name was not changed to Brunswick-Balke-Collender until 1884), and several of these tokens have been included in our listing of "Brunswick" tokens, since his firm was one of the forerunners of the Brunswick-Balke-Collender Company.

Some other firms issuing tokens in the Brunswick manner — with the company advertisement on the reverse — include the Garden City Billiard Table Company; George Kuehl & Bro. (Also listed as George Kuehl Billiard Supplies); the Merle & Heaney Mfg. Co. Billiard Supplies; Charles Passow and Sons; Schulenberg Billiard Tables; Stoll & Merz, and C. Tuckhorn, all of Chicago; National Billiard Manfg. Co., and R. Rothschild's Sons of Cincinnati: D.W. Seely of Elmira, New York; George E. Phelan and the W.H. Griffin & Co., both of New York City; and A.E. Schmidt and the Superior Billiard Co. of St. Louis. A.E. Schmidt was a particularly prolific issuer of tokens, and many of his tokens still surface throughout the country. Schulenberg was in business at least as early as 1869, and could have been an early supplier of tokens.

There likely were many others unknown to the compilers of this document. In fact, Stephen Album's "Billiard Table Manufacturers and Their Tokens, 1875-1915," which appeared in the October, 1971, issue of the Cal-Neva Token Ledger lists a number of these firms in the San Francisco area alone. Among them were Jacob Strahle & Co. and its successor firm the St. Germain Billiard Company; August Jungblut & Co; Chas. Passow & Sons; and the E. Brunswick Billiard Table Company.

The tokens issued by Emanuel Brunswick with the E. Brunswick Billiard Table Company advertising card are considered a category of the "Brunswick" tokens, and those known to the writers are included in the listing. The tokens issued by some of the other firms listed in this section are illustrated here:

Significant Dates

In the earlier TAMS Journal article on the "Brunswick tokens we assumed that Brunswick & Company was a part of the John M. Brunswick organization and was the predecessor of the J.M. Brunswick and Balke Company. Operating under this assumption it became a relatively easy matter to categorize the "Brunswick" tokens by date. Those bearing the card of Brunswick & Company were considered to have been issued prior to the 1874 merger with Julius Balke; the J.M. Brunswick and Balke tokens were attributed to the 1874-84 period; and the Brunswick-Collender tokens were dated from 1884.

This was perhaps a plausible assumption, but it turned out to be an erroneous one. As we have seen, our subsequent research developed the fact that Brunswick & Company was actually a separate firm, although family related.

So far, we have been unable to determine the reason for there being two separate organizations in the same family engaged in the same business. If it were a strategic business ploy designed to assimilate rival billiard table manufacturers and minimize competition, we might consider that both organizations were part of the John M. Brunswick dynasty. On the other hand, if Brunswick & Company operated as a legitimate competitor, we are very likely dealing with two Brunswick dynasties, with Emanuel heading up the second one. Regardless of the reason, however, we feel that the tokens issued by Brunswick & Company, as well as those issued by the E. Brunswick Billiard Table Company of San Francisco in the late 1880s, properly belong among the "Brunswick" tokens, and we have so listed them.

We have not established with any degree of exactitude just when Brunswick started supplying tokens to its customers. Since by far the greater number of all "Brunswick" tokens that have been attributed as to location are saloon tokens, it's a good bet that the company did not get in the token business until after it began making saloon fixtures. We have not found any tokens carrying the advertising card of John M. Brunswick & Bro., John M. Brunswick & Bros., or the John M. Brunswick Billiard Manufacturing Company. This seems to say that Brunswick was not in the token business until after the 1874 merger with Julius Balke. And this points up the fact that the only dates we can use with a fair degree of confidence are those marking the periods of existence of the various organizations: 1874-84 for the Brunswick & Balke Company; 1875-79 for the H.W. Collender Company (Collender is known to have been with the Chicago firm of Stephani, Hart & Company as late as 1875); 1884-1960 for the Brunswick-Balke-Collender Company; 1877-1894 for Brunswick & Company, and 1888-89 for the E. Brunswick Billiard Table Company of San Francisco.

The date that an organization ceased to exist generally may be taken as the date that particular organization stopped supplying tokens with the exception of the Brunswick-Balke-Collender Company. In a letter to Dick Magnuson, written in 1972, a Brunswick Corporation official said: "According to our old catalogs, the company advertised the metal tokens for sale . . . for many years prior to 1940, at which time the company discontinued the sale of them."

However, this same official is reported in Coin World of July 14, 1965, as having written Melvin Fuld: "These checks were offered for sale until 1929". Since the use of trade tokens declined rapidly after the 1920s, the 1929 date is probably close enough to serve as a benchmark in the absence of definite information.

We do have positive information, in the form of a company catalog, that tokens were being offered for sale as late as 1928. This information raises another question, though, as all of the tokens illustrated in the 1928 catalog have the common "Good For" reverse, indicating that — at least by this date and we don't know how much earlier — the company had discontinued the release of tokens bearing its advertising card on the reverse. It is known that Brunswick had supplied tokens without its card for sometime before this, as the "Good For" reverse type tokens were being advertised in the company catalog as early as 1914. Of course, it is possible — even probable — that tokens without the Brunswick card were issued at the same time as those with it, with the latter being sold at a reduced price or perhaps being given to the purchaser of new Brunswick equipment.

Since the vast majority of all Brunswick tokens were mavericks — the utilization of the reverse for the company's advertisement leaving the using firm only the obverse for its message — the dates we have discussed in this section are of prime importance to the token collector seeking to attribute his Brunswick tokens. We believe we can safely say that a maverick researcher can limit the scope of his research to those source documents covering the pertinent time periods of the J.M. Brunswick & Balke Company with the Brunswick-Balke-Collender Company. There are some indications that J.M. Brunswick and Balke tokens may have been issued after the 1884 merger date. This may have been issued after the 1884 merger date. This may have come about because the company did not immediately adopt its new title after the merger, but a more likely circumstance is that some of the dies in use at the time of the merger were continued in use for a while — possibly a year or so — thus accounting for some of the late issuances that appear to have been made.

A couple of examples illustrating the importance of issuing dates might help. The J.M. Brunswick & Balke Cos. tokens shown in the 1974 Journal as issued by W.J.H. Umland of Round Top, Texas, are known to have been issued before the merger with Collender because family records show that great grandfather Umland moved to Carmine, Texas, in 1882 to go into the general mercantile business with his son-in-law, W.H. Hoppe. On the other hand, the Brunswick & Balke token shown in the same article as having been issued by The Mint (saloon) of Fort Worth, Texas, has now been returned to the unidentified file, because further research disclosed that The Mint did not make its appearance in Fort Worth until 1908.

Further verification of the reliability of the dates given in this section will come, through objective and thorough research on these Brunswick tokens on which the location data is shown or is otherwise ascertained. As collectors attribute additional Brunswick tokens through the study of state and city directories, Dunn and Bradstreet, family records and other sources available to them, we should be able to begin pinpointing issuance dates with greater certainty.

Physical Characteristics of the Brunswick Tokens

Many of the Brunswick tokens that have come down to us are sufficiently worn to show that they have served well their purpose as a medium of exchange during times when the small change in circulation was a great deal scarcer than it is today. Some of these are "dug" tokens, or tokens that have been otherwise exposed to the elements long enough to bring about deterioration of the metal, but these are still prized if they are decipherable. Occasionally, one turns up that has lain long forgotten in an old cash register or bureau drawer — just as sharp and beautiful as it was the day it first was sprung from the press.

Like other Brunswick products, the tokens supplied by the company to its customers were of first quality. The die work was good, and the tokens always were struck on planchets large enough and heavy enough to give them a feeling of substance and a ring of authenticity.

We have no evidence that Brunswick was ever in the token striking business, although this is a possibility.

The tokens we have designated in this document as Type B-3 perhaps offer the strongest indication that Brunswick may have made tokens, as the reverse logo is very similar to those used by August Kern. A.E. Schmidt, Blanke & Hauk and other early token makers. Moreover, the Brunswick/ (STAR)/ & Co. reverse of the B-3 token (as shown here by the Lee's Saloon token, which has been attributed to an early Fayetteville, Texas, public house) would seem to have very little advertising value for any business other than that of token maker.

On the other hand, there is quite a bit of available information to show that the company contracted with other firms to produce the tokens that it sold to its customers. In the letter to Dick Magnuson, cited above, the writer states: "It is my understanding that Brunswick did not manufacture the checks, but purchased them from a coin manufacturer." Also, the March, 1914, price list carries a footnote saying that the checks were to be shipped "F.O.B. Chicago, Muskegon, or Dubuque, and freight must be added to point of destination," thus indicating that tokens were being struck for Brunswick in at least these three locations at that particular time. Actually, we feel that the great number of varieties found within each major type of the "Brunswick" tokens is indicative of the fact that Brunswick dealt with many different token manufacturers over the years, and that many of these firms had die sinkers who added their own individual — and sometimes artistic — touches to the dies. We do not know at this time very many of the firms that made tokens for the Brunswicks, but we do have a couple of tokens carrying the names of prominent token manufacturers — one was made by Murdock of Cincinnati, the other by Moise of San Francisco. Hanson, Boche and Childs of Chicago; Meyer and Illig, St. Louis; and Klinker of San Francisco are others known to have made tokens for Brunswick.

Henry Ford is reported to have said about his famous T-model that the customer could have any color he wanted "so long as it is black". Brunswick could have said about the same thing about its tokens — that the customer could have any kind that he wanted so long as they were brass, round, and 24 or 25 millimeters. And these specifications would have described the physical appearance of the greater part of all of the Brunswick tokens, even though they are known in quite a variety of shapes, sizes and metals.

In addition to the numerous round tokens, there are quite a few octagonal ones as well as a handful of other shapes — square ones and scalloped ones with four lobes and eight lobes. As we might expect, Brunswick apparently didn't go in for the fancy or unusual shapes — the ovals, the hearts, the acorns, the square ones with concave corners, or even the more common hexagon. The company did, however, have special names for the four-lobed token (clover leaf) and the eight-lobed one (rose leaf). In our listing we have not distinquished between the four and eight-lobed tokens, but have simply designated both types as "Sc".

Sizes generally run in the 24, 24.5, and 25 millimeter range, although a few are listed at 23 and 26 millimeters, and a very few are shown at 22 and 27 millimeters. The smallest size shown is 19 millimeters and the largest is 30. Surprisingly, the 21 millimeter tokens and the 28 and 29 millimeter ones are not as rare as some of the other sizes. Most of the larger tokens are scalloped, and scalloped tokens appear to run a little larger than some of the other shapes. It is interesting to note that nearly all of the 21 millimeter tokens seem to fall in Type BBC-5a, while most of the 29 millimeter ones are Type BBC-8. Could it be that most of the tokens in the smaller and larger sizes were each made by a single token maker?

One other thought provoking item on token sizes comes from the 1928 Brunswick catalog, where the round tokens are advertised as the "exact size of a nickel", "dime", "quarter", etc. One wonders how popular these tokens were with the vending machine operators of that day and time. Also, one wonders just how many of these tokens were sold in view of the fact that token sets found today with the 10¢ piece smaller than the 5¢ 'er are scarcer than the proverbial hen's teeth.

Most metals commonly used in the manufacture of trade tokens were used in the Brunswick tokens, including aluminum, brass, bronze, coppernickel, nickel, and German silver. For ease of reference, we have used the generic term "white metal" in this document to describe all types of silvery metallic substances other then aluminum. Also, we have not attempted to distinguish brass and the various bronzes (dark, light, yellow, etc.), but have used the letter "B" to mean either brass or bronze. One important point to be considered by the token researcher trying to establish dates of issuance of his tokens is the fact that aluminum did not come into widespread use in token manufacturing until after this "new" metal had been popularized by its use in many medals and other objects of exonumia during the Chicago Columbian Exposition in 1892-3. Even then, it was somewhat more expensive than the other token metals and remained so until at least 1914, when the Brunswick catalog quoted aluminum tokens from 10 to 25% higher than brass. This picture had changed by 1928, however, when only the prices on aluminum tokens were quoted, along with a notation "Brass check prices quoted upon request".

The Obverse Legends

While, we have established the likelihood that Brunswick sold tokens without the company's advertising card on the reverse (the 1914 price list says, "We can furnish any special style check wanted. Send rough diagram and we will quote prices"), we have no way of identifying any such tokens and hence are not concerned with them here. This means that on all the "Brunswick" tokens, as we know them, only the obverse was available to the purchaser to inscribe whatever information he wanted to convey to his customers.

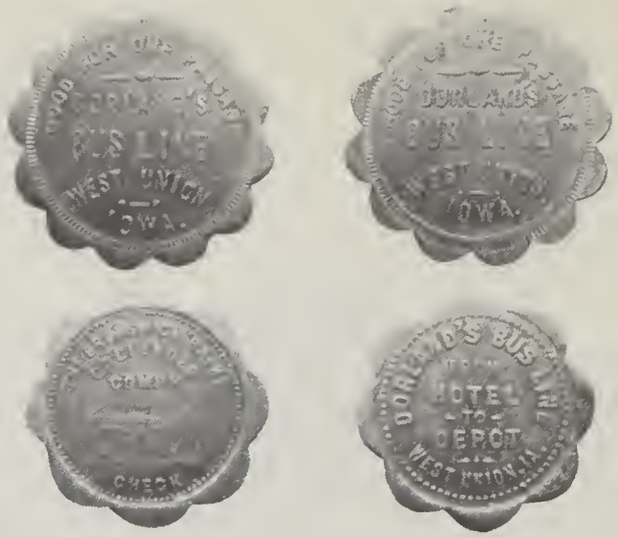
This limitation on space resulted not only in the omission of the location data — better than 90% of these tokens are mavericks — but also restricted other identification information to the barest essentials. For example, the kind of business conducted by the issuer was seldom designated except for saloons, whose proprietors seemed to have a great deal of faith in the pulling power of an unique or unusual name.

Moreover, since the tokens were more attractive when there was some open space left, firm identification was often limited to the proprietor's name, and in many cases just to his first or last name, or his initials. This probably worked just as well as more definitive information would have, since trade involving the use of tokens usually was largely confined to local customers who had no difficulty remembering the source of the token. It does, however, make the attribution of these tokens immeasurably more difficult and, of course, more exciting.

Naturally, we would expect saloons and billiard parlors to be the most prolific users of the Brunswick tokens. These were two of the principal product lines during many of the years the company was providing trade tokens, and the establishments purchasing these products were prime token prospects for the Brunswick salesman. The limited information available on the obverse, plus that acquired from known attributions, upholds this expectation. Saloons were by far the leading users, but there also is evidence of fairly widespread use in the billiard parlors and pool halls. Interestingly, the 1928 catalog states: "No orders accepted for trade checks if the word "Pool" is to be imprinted on them." Evidently, the Brunswick heirarchy had at this time decided that "pool" was a degrading word, and that "pocket billiards" or just plain "billiards" was more genteel and, consequently, preferable.

Remember, too, that saloons were often closely associated with the billiard parlors, sometimes under the same roof and the same proprietorship. So it is likely that many of the saloon tokens — particularly those showing "Good For 5¢" or "Good For 5¢ in Trade" — were used interchangeably at the bar and the billiard table. The price of the game has now gone up, but back in the token days pocket billiards was 5¢ a game, with the loser paying 10¢ and the houseman giving the winner a 5¢ token to be used when he lost a game or felt the need for liquid refreshments. By the way, this same little game of chance is still standard operating procedure in the domino halls of the Southwest, and perhaps elsewhere.

Cigar stores also were known users of Brunswick tokens, as were bowling alleys, cafes, fraternal organizations and even one church. In addition, many tokens bear the names of hotels, public houses, clubs and so on. Chances are that these tokens were used primarily in the bars and billiard rooms of these establishments, but they probably were also accepted at the cigar counters, news stands, and elsewhere in these establishments where there was an exchange of goods or services for money. Further research, no doubt, will reveal additional kinds of businesses that used these tokens, even though the billiard table advertisement on the reverse may have borne little or no relationship to the business of the user.



Of interest to our vecturist friends is the fact that there were at least two transportation related Brunswick tokens. One was issued by Dorland's Busline of West Union, Iowa, and is catalogued by Atwood as Iowa 980 B. The other, issued by the Capital City Ferry Company, is listed in Atwood as unidentified token #91, but has since been identified as a Jefferson City, Missouri, token. It has not yet been established that it was used for transportation, however.

The denominations given on the obverses of the Brunswick tokens sometimes help in identifying the business of the users. A few of these tokens do not show any denominations, and hence are more in the nature of store cards than tokens. A run down of the denominations given in our listing shows that the very great majority of these tokens were 5¢, some simply "Good For 5¢", and others "Good For 5¢ in Trade", "... at the Bar", "... a 5¢ Cigar", "... a 5¢ Drink", while one was good for "V". The next largest denomination category is "... "One Drink", followed by the 10¢, 12½¢, and 2½¢ denominations in that order. The 25¢ denomination is the only other category of any size. Other listed denominations are 1¢, 3½¢, 7¢, one dance (shows much wear!), 1 bath (shows very little wear!), 1 beer, 1 bit, 1 billiard check, 1 cigar, 1 cigar or drink, 1 meal, and simply "in Trade". We have not found any sets, consisting of tokens of several denominations from the same business firm, other than a few 5¢ and 10¢ combinations.

The obverses of the Brunswick tokens — and particularly the later ones — tended to become more or less standardized, with the firm's name appearing in a long oval. After striking the required number of tokens, the manufacturer could replace the plug, with one bearing the name of the next user firm, and thus use the same obverse dies to strike tokens for many customers. In addition, the denomination appearing in the rectangle could be replaced in the same manner. Note here the obverses of the next user firm, and thus use the same obverse dies to strike tokens for many customers. In addition, the denomination appearing in the rectangle could be replaced in the same manner. Note here the obverses of the tokens struck for H. Lalond and John R. Lawrence are exactly the same, even to the die breaks under the "5" and over the "in". Note also that the token maker struck these tokens for two different billiard table manufacturers: Brunswick & Company and The Brunswick-Balke-Collender Company.

Here are a couple of additional examples: one where the token maker used his obverse dies to strike tokens for customers of The Garden City Billiard Table Company and The Brunswick-Balke-Collender Company; the other where the same obverse dies are used to match up a J.M. Brunswick & Balke Companys' token with a run of the mill denominational reverse.

The obverses of the Brunswick tokens truly offer a fertile field for further research and study by collectors of these and other tokens carrying the advertising card of billiard table manufacturers and other token suppliers. They hold many clues that could lead us to the manufacturers who made the tokens that Brunswick distributed to its customers, as well as help us tie down the dates of issuance of many of these tokens and aid us in the identification of the user firms.

The Reverse Legends

Although we have now learned a great deal about the obverse legends of the "Brunswick" tokens, we still must turn to the reverse legends for our cataloging information. At the time the 1974 TAMS Journal article was written, we recognized three major categories of the tokens, seven different types within these categories, and a few varieties of some of these types. Since that time, we have added two major categories and the number of types and varieties within types have proliferated to the point where it became necessary to devise a systematic method of numbering and presenting the reverse dies to provide an orderly means of identification and reference. This system is described in detail in the Reverse Die Listing section of this document.

Many wonderful people have helped with the preparation of this document during the many months of its development. While we shall not attempt to designate each one by name, we do want to express our sincere appreciation to each and every one of you. Your contributions, both great and small, have made this document possible.

REVERSE DIE LISTING

This listing covers the various reverse dies used on the "Brunswick" tokens. The dies have been assigned to five categories designated by letter(s) which refer to the issuing firm:

- B Brunswick & Company
- EB E. Brunswick Billiard Table Co.
- BB J.M. Brunswick & Balke Co.
- C H.W. Collender Co.
- BBC Brunswick Balke Collender Co.

Within each of these major categories, we have further segregated the dies by type, based on substantial differences in the dies, with a further breakdown by variety to indicate minor, but readily apparent, differences. Thus, B-1, B-2 and B-3 are used to designate the three known types issued by Brunswick & Company, while B-2a, b, c, etc. indicate varieties of the B-2 token. We have found that some types, particularly in the BBC category, have a large number of varieties; consequently, we have not attempted to catalog those varieties where the variations are of little significance and not readily apparent. We have, however, made note of the number of variations found in particular varieties in most instances.
